Collecting Track & Field

When it comes to track and field collectibles, there's almost as many ways for the discriminating fan to build a collection, as there are track and field events.

Whether their interests lie in trading cards, autographs, programs, medals, stamps, magazines, or books, there's a wide range of opportunities.

We'll begin by looking at track and field trading cards.

The earliest track and field trading cards were printed in 1888, and inserted into Allen and Ginter cigarette packages. They featured a lithograph painting of an athlete fading into a solid white background.

These 3-1/4 inch tall and 2-7/8 inch wide "cards" were offered as promotional items for their Richmond, Va. - based cigarette brands.

Besides boxers, baseball players, cyclists and other athletes, nine track and field athletes were included in that initial 50-card N29 World Champions set.

Over the years, other countries began printing track trading cards were also printed in countries, such as Germany, France, Italy, Sweden, and the United Kingdom.

While you can collect cards by the set, such as the N29's, Germany's Bravour-Bilder Film Und Sport (1933), or British Athletics (1992), you can also collect cards of your favorite athlete, such as Des Moines-own LoLo Jones, or Sioux City's Shelby Houlihan.

You could also just as well collect cards of shot put throwers, high jumpers, long jumpers, or pole vaulters.

Just prior to the last two Summer Olympics, Topps has printed cards of Olympic hopefuls. It's 2016 set featured 11 track and field Olympians in four-card sets, complete with a base card, and a gold, silver and bronze card. The set also included worn uniform memorabilia, and other inserts.

It's 2012 set included 26 track and field athletes, including wheelchair racer Tatyana McFadden and Lolo Jones.

Today's sport card companies also release autograph cards as part of their sets. The athlete either signs directly onto the card, or onto a piece of tape, which is then placed onto the cards. These autographs are considered "certified" by the card companies.

While athletes are often asked to provide autographs during track

1960 U.S. Olympic Trials made it to the July 11, 1960 issue.

Track and field athletes have graced other magazine titles, including Time, Track and Field News, Spikes, and ESPN magazines.

Track and field programs, ranging from national meets such as the Drake Relays to local meets (State High School Championships or local college dual meets) are also highly sought after by collectors. A 1970 NCAA Track & Field Championships program, held at Drake University and featuring Prefontaine sold for $250.

Other track and field collectibles include:

- * Phone cards - (either used or unused), featuring track athletes on the front. These come in many different denominations;

- * Pocket schedules - Highlighting the season for college track and field teams;

- * Pins - Whether created for individual track meets, a country's national track team, or for a commercial company supporting Olympic track, you can find any kind of pin you want to collect;

- * Photos - Ranging from 3x5, to 8x10 and larger, you can find many historical photos available on the market.

One nice thing about collecting track and field, is you can find still some really nice items for very reasonable prices. Baseball and Football cards have nice prices.

The bottom line, however, is with so many options out there, collect what you enjoy.

meets, you can also find addresses to mail them to for their signature, as long as you include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. This form of autographs are called TTM, or Through The Mail.

Another venue open to track and field collectors are magazines and programs.

Sports Illustrated immediately comes to mind. Its June 15, 1970 cover featured University of Oregon Freshman Steve Prefontaine, and Jim Beatty competing during the

Nominations sought for second annual USATF Iowa Athletes, Coaches and Officials awards

Following the success of last season's USATF Iowa Athletes, Coaches and Officials of the Year Awards, nominations are now open for prospective 2019 recipients.

USATF Iowa members will soon receive an E-mail with instructions on how to nominate Iowa Association members. Remember, only USATF Iowa members are eligible.

Nominations must include name, age, category, and four- to five-sentences telling why this member should be nominated for that award. Cross country nominees may be based on the current season, while track and field athletes comments should be based on the recently-concluded season.

On Oct. 11, nominations will cease and the nominating committee will review each nomination, before narrowing each category down to three to four nominees.

Members will then be able to vote on-line for a member in each category. They will only be able to vote once, and will need to use their USATF member number to register to vote.

Voters will have two weeks to vote for their favorite in each category. The Awards will be presented during the USATF annual meeting, to be held Sunday, Nov. 17, at the Mid-Iowa Boys Scouts Building, 6123 Scout Trail, Des Moines.

While 12 awards were presented last year, this year's event has been expanded to 18 categories. They include:
